Where Ethics and Compliance Meet A Day in the Life of a HR Professional: Where Ethics and Compliance Meet Thursday, September 10, 2020 7:30am-10:30am This is a virtual program - meeting information will be sent to all pre-registered attendees Through the use of an evolving case study, this program examines the challenges for HR managers in balancing compliance and ethics in the work place regarding selected demographic factors of employees that are often embedded in the diverse populations via intersectionality: “multiple special abilities, traits, and identities occurring concurrently” (Deloitte, 2013). These kinds of factors require perceptive sensitivity, forethought, and strategizing when facilitated by HR managers, especially as those HR managers strive to balance both ethical practices and compliance with the law. Via facilitated group discussions, participants will apply learnings to create their own practical take-away tool: a compliance checklist of considerations for daily use. By the end of this session, participants will: Identify unique aspects of diversity decisions when considering intersectionality. Explore compliance issues for each situation according to the diversity aspects involved. List pros and cons regarding compliance strategies that address each of the diversity factors, in light of their own ethics, corporate cultures, and the law. Assemble a hierarchy of compliance and ethical steps that represent possible future strategies when exploring the HR management decision in their workplace. About our Presenter: Frank A.
